

Rhamnus californica 'Eve Case'
Coffee Berry

Shrub

Part sun or shade

Moderate water

Origin: California

Eve Case Coffeeberry is an evergreen California native shrub that grows five feet high and wide. With only a little pruning the size can be controlled. It needs fast draining soil. New growth is red, spring flowers are small and yellow green, fall berries turn various colors as they mature. Birds and small mammals are attracted to the fruit. Seedlings can sometimes be plentiful. It makes a good hedge or screen especially since It can take sun or shade. The leaves tend to grow larger in the shade. Fruit can stain concrete so place Coffeeberry with this in mind. If a plant becomes too large or woody it can be cut nearly to the ground to refresh the foliage.
